Curt Jett, charged with the murder of James B. Marcum, was arrested Sunday morning shortly after three o'clock at his mother's home in Madison county, near the Kentucky river, by Sheriff Woodson McChord, Deputy Sheriff J. T. Stokely, of Clark county, and a posse of six men, and placed in the Clark county jail.

Jett made no attempt to resist arrest, although he had a big gun under his pillow and inside the house had every advantage of the officers. Sheriff McChord and Deputy Sheriff Stokely approached the house, leaving the rest of the party stationed in places of advantage in the yard. He was in bed, and when informed of the mission of the officers quietly submitted.

The Sheriff and his posse, with Jett, returned to Winchester about 5 o'clock, and Jett was placed in the county jail. Jett was fairly communicative when questioned in regard to all matters except the assassination of J. B. Marcum. When the assassination was mentioned he grew sullen and parried every question.

The warrant for Jett's arrest was issued by Police Judge Pendleton, of Winchester, upon an affidavit sworn to by Sam Jett, charging him with the murder of James B. Marcum. Jett had gone from Jackson to Winchester Saturday afternoon, and had gone to his mother's home in the upper end of Madison county about 6 o'clock. To Sheriff McChord he said that his mother had been ill with rheumatism and had asked him to pay her a visit.

Sheriff McChord, together with Deputy Stokely, soon secured a posse, a number of young men volunteering to go with them. In the party were Messrs. W. A. Adams, C. D. Hoskins, Charles Derickson, June Hunter, H. W. Scrivener and H. B. Scrivener. Mr. Adams was in his youth a neighbor of Jett and went as a pilot.

Jett's father, Hiram Jett, a well-to-do citizen of Winchester, died in September, 1893, and his mother afterwards married a man by the name of Hagins. They live in Madison county, about two miles from Jackson's Ferry, and about 12 miles from Winchester.

Sheriff McChord and his posse left Winchester in four buggies shortly after midnight and drove to Jackson's Ferry, 10 miles distant. All were well supplied with pistols, for they did not know what kind of a reception they would receive. They arrived at Jackson's Ferry about 2 a. m. and left their horses and buggies, the road to Mrs. Hagins' home being far out of the way and very inconveniently reached. They were rowed across the Kentucky river in boats and then took up their two-mile tramp to Mrs. Hagins' home. It was 3 o'clock when the party reached the house.

When the posse had been placed Sheriff McChord and Deputy Stokely approached the house and knocked at the front door. Mrs. Hagins answered the knock and was asked by Deputy Stokely if her husband was at home. She said he was not there. He then asked if Curt Jett was there. For a moment she hesitated and then admitted that he was. She was told that they wanted to see him, and she re-entered the house, and after a short delay returned. Then it was that the officers told her who they were. She directed them to go to the rear of the house, saying that she would let them in by the rear door.

When the officers first entered the yard they saw a light burning in a rear room. When they reached the rear of the house there was no light in the room. This made the officers somewhat suspicious and they hesitated on the door step. Finally the light reappeared and the door was opened. An unknown man was standing in the shadow and the officers eyed him closely.

When the officers entered the room they found Jett in bed. He had only his night clothes on and was leaning on his elbow. Underneath his pillow the officers saw the handle of a big pistol.

"Hello, Curt," said Sheriff McChord, walking to the bed and taking his hand. "I have a warrant for your arrest."

Jett did not move and displayed no surprise or emotion. "All right, Woods," he said, "I will submit to you; you won't have any trouble with me. All I want is to be treated right and protected."

Sheriff McChord assured him that he would be perfectly safe in his hands, and then read the warrant to him, in which he is charged with the murder of James B. Marcum. Jett never said a word, but his mother said: "I don't believe Curt did it."

Curt then dressed and prepared to go with the officers. He took his gun from under his pillow and gave it to his mother, requesting her to keep it safe for him. Deputy Stokely, out of curiosity, asked to see the gun that is alleged to have played so important a part in the late history of Breathitt county. Jett shook his head and laughingly said: "Oh, you don't want to see it."

All the time the officers were in the room and while Jett was dressing they say they were expecting to be fired on at any moment. The unknown man who had opened the door for them had come into the room and stood so as to flank them. The door to a room opening into Jett's room was slightly ajar and seemed to be held by some person who was peering through the two-inch crack. This made the officers feel very uncomfortable, but no effort to interfere with them was made.

Died at Paris, Illinois.

Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Turner, widow of James S. Turner, died Sunday at 7:30 a. m., the 10th inst., at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. J. Will Miller, at Paris, Ills., and was buried Tuesday at Mt. Sterling beside her husband and son, Harlan. She had been in declining health for many months, and all that skilled physicians and loving hands could do was of no avail. Mrs. Turner was born in our village (Hazel Green) Nov. 3d, 1833, and was the daughter of Wm. and Eleonor Trimble; and of a large family of brothers and sisters there only remains one sister, Mrs. Louisa Wilson, of Lee City, and four brothers—J. G. Trimble, of Mt. Sterling; Shelton, of Menefee county; Frank, of Memphis, and Preston, of our village. Mrs. Turner was an estimable, lovable woman, with thousands of devoted friends and not an enemy. Only two of her children survive her, Mrs. Belle Miller and Clarence Turner, both residing in Paris, Illinois.

E. B. Carr, Superintendent of the Morehead and West Liberty road, says that the road has been sold to Baltimore capitalists and work on completion of the road will begin June 1. A new company will be organized and work rapidly pushed to completion. The road has been hanging fire for years, but now it is a sure go.

GHANDDAD'S ROCKIN' CHAIR.

A homely built, old-fashioned thing, its joints in every part worn loose. Its arms of strong, unpainted wood well polished from an age of use. Its creaky rockers seemed to cry as in exasperating pain.

For generations it had stood upon the footstool floor beside the old fireplace from which the flames licked upward through the chimney wide.

And young and old through years of time had loved and venerated it. That old split-bottomed rocking chair in which her granddaddy used to sit.

She told me all its history, that maiden of the rosy face. As we would sit on winter nights before the cheery old fireplace. From when it left the builder's hands and sat as if in silent pride.

Within a humble cottage when her grandmother was a bride. Down through the generations till her father inherited the prize.

And as she talked the old chair seemed to be the center of her eyes. Enchained my heart in willing bonds. And I, too, pined my love to it. That old split-bottomed rocking chair in which her granddaddy used to sit.

She told me how the good old man would seldom leave that honored seat. When weight of passing years became too heavy for his tiring feet.

And how he'd sometimes sit for hours held as if in a heavenly spell. Upon his knees an open book, the Bible that he loved so well.

How she, a toddling youngster then, would kneel beside her when he read. And how her prayer at his knee, his withered hand upon her head.

And as she talked her lovely eyes with holy inspiration lit. As rocked she slowly in the chair in which her granddaddy used to sit.

That was only built for one, and yet we found it strong enough for two. As in our hearts the spark of love into a flaming passion grew.

And, spite of his protesting creaks, I one night pressed her to my heart. And snaked the glowing words of love that made her smile till death shall part.

And as I sit and watch her as she rocks our bounding boy in her red. Her curly golden sleep head soft pillowed on her mother breast.

I feel that mine, if possible, is greater than her love for it. That old split-bottomed rocking chair in which her granddaddy used to sit.

THE MUSICIAN NEXT DOOR.

By S. Rhett Roman.

It may be that a flute is worse than a piano in the hands of an unreasonable individual. I ruminated. But then again no man can expend on a flute more than one hour at a time. Human lungs could stand no more. But the piano offers a limitless length of time in which to exorcise the ears and nerves of a next-door neighbor.

"You say you signed a year's lease for these rooms?" I asked Harris.

"Yes, sir; they seemed to agree with your instructions, so I thought I had better take them, as they are downtown and in pretty good condition. You said in the French part of town, sir."

"So I did, Harris. They are very good rooms and you've had them renovated quite satisfactorily. The upholstery, you know, is new. It is business," I remarked, looking around at the really fine antique furniture filling the high-ceilinged, spacious, old-fashioned rooms and the somber but beautiful draperies, whose tones chimed excellently well with the black rosewood, dark mahogany and old oak, which made up the furnishing of my suite of rooms in the dilapidated old French quarter of this pleasant Southern city.

"It's all right, Harris. Those brackets and mantle ornaments are superb. I'm glad you had them in the bathroom and electric lights and bells put around. I wish you had found out that musician, however. Who is he?"

"He has a French name, sir. Mr. St. Julien Dubuelt. He plays in the orchestra at the French opera. I had known about his living next door. I wouldn't have taken the rooms, sir. When I heard of it I thought the walls were so thick you wouldn't be annoyed." Harris was serving the first meal I was enjoying in my new quarters, and while giving this explanation a rhythmic running of scales came faintly but audibly from somebody's very nimble fingers over next door.

"It wouldn't be so loud," ventured Harris, cautiously, placing Riquetfort and coffee on the table, "if the glass doors on the front piazza were shut. It did seem so springlike I thought I'd better open them, sir."

"Leave them alone," I interposed, as Harris went through the drawing room towards the pretty old-fashioned French windows opening on a broad veranda, evidently intending to close them.

The scales drifted into some wonderful exercises—at least I supposed they were—then I recognized Mendelssohn, and by the time I had lighted a cigar and was seated comfortably in an armchair by the side of a wood fire in an open fireplace, I was halfway recovered to Mr. St. Julien Dubuelt's music. His rendering and execution were astonishingly good.

Another fear assailed me. "Does he give lessons?" I inquired, anxiously.

"I believe he does, sir," Harris admitted, reluctantly.

"Good Lord!" I ejaculated in dismay.

For having come to this good old Southern town to spend the winter quietly compiling and classifying data for a work I was engaged on, I expected to spend most of my mornings and evenings in the study I had instructed Harris to have fitted up for me.

Just as before I was aware of the musician next door. Well, if he gave lessons, playing beside Bertha, even and Bach by the hour, I would simply have to move out, that was all there was to it.

And these apologetic old women, remodeled and so gracefully reminiscent of times and days long past, had taken a strong hold on my fancy, and I would certainly leave them with regret.

"I think the old gentleman goes out to give his lessons, sir. I see him pass with his violin case every day," Harris explained, lighting the candles placed in bronze candelabra against the wall.

I insisted on their being used, because the light mingled pleasantly with the gas and softened it.

Who cares for any but the old masters, if once familiar with their sublime inspirations, I thought, lazily enjoying the glorious strains.

Monsieur Dubuelt's sonatas carried me pleasantly back to Heidelberg and Leipzig, and my university days, and in the light curl of smoke, going up from my cigar to the faded frescoes of the ceiling, I seemed to see the laughing face of a certain little brunetness, who certainly taught me more and better German than the professors.

ONE OF THE EARLY BIRDS.

Two men coming out of my neighbor's door, speaking robustly in French, corroborated the man's statement.

I went back, turned on the electric lights and prepared for an hour or two of hard work, wondering over what seemed rather inexplicable.

It was quite late when there was a light, hurried knock at the door.

"I'm afraid he is very ill. He is so restless, and he does not recognize me. I can't leave him, and I saw the light over here, so I thought—"

I stood silent, too much amazed at the beauty of the face before me, to answer her timid request, until a soft color like a pink flame swept over it and her great grey eyes filled with tears.

"Beg your pardon a thousand times," I said hurriedly. "Of course I will do anything in the world for Monsieur Dubuelt. I am sure you are needlessly alarmed. If you will let me go to him I can judge better what to do."

We went down stairs and over into my neighbor's room, which was bare and forlorn, an Erard piano standing against the partition wall.

"Nothing to be alarmed about," I said, arranging a bandage through which blood had oozed.

"Who is she?" I wondered, doing what I could to relieve him, before going for a physician and nurse.

When I came back with both I learned that the wound was not serious.

His habits, like all those Bohemian musicians, are evidently very bad.

"The man is a hard drinker. But he'll be all over it in a few days," my friend Bolton said, writing out a prescription, after giving directions.

"That daughter of his is the most perfectly beautiful woman I ever saw. Splendid, too. She's devoted to him, and miles superior to him. Good old stock, but he's gone to the dogs, and she follows him all over the country, to take care of him. Strangers? No, indeed, I've known 'em for years."

Bolton added, as we went down the hall together.

"Why, I've told Alma a hundred times she ought to marry me instead of supporting that her good-for-nothing father, teaching music and nursing him when he gets into trouble. She's the greatest pianist I ever heard, and the grandest woman I know."

The front door closed on Bolton, who promised to come early in the morning, and I went slowly back to the bare room where the wounded man lay.

"The nurse says she won't have you here. That you must go to bed," I said, gently taking Alma's hand and leading her away.

HE HATCHED TROUBLE.

Somewhat Flighty Reminiscences of a Rooster Who Was Picked.

"Alas," sighs the poor husband as his wife leaves the room and he picks himself out of the debris of the book shelves; "alas! what a goose I was to call her my little duck!"

He buries himself in sorrowful reflections, says Judge.

"Yes," he moans, "that was what started it all. At that time I did not know she was no spring chicken. I thought she was a bird."

"For I will never forget your kindness," she said softly.

"You will come back?" I asked slowly.

"Oh, yes, some day—when we are married," she said, smiling, while a radiance swept over her face.

The Erard piano was to be carried away after they left.

But now it stands in a corner of this room and the Cupids and Psyche in the fresco ceiling look laughingly down because it is never open.

It am getting on very well with my work. I have collected an immense amount of valuable data. The press has made flattering mention—entirely unsolicited—as to the coming book and its author.

A Diplomatic Editor.—A young lady recently sent this extraordinary request to the editor of her church paper: "Do you think it is right for a girl to sit in a man's lap, even if she is engaged?"

The religious editor answered her question thusly: "If it were our girl and our lap, yes; if it were another fellow's girl and our lap, yes; but if it were our girl and another fellow's lap, never! never! never!"—Buffalo Times.

Legally Qualified.—An old but still sprightly patriarch stepped up to vote. "How long have you resided in this precinct?" asked one of the judges of the election. "Let me see," said the old man, musingly. "I moved here the next year after Lamech was born. Seven from nine leaves two. Eight from 16 is eight. One to carry. Two from nine is seven. Something over 700 years, gentlemen. I am old enough to vote, too—if anybody should ask you." Whereupon, there being no objection, Methuselah—for it was he—was allowed to deposit his ballot.—Baltimore American.

Pearl Parasites.

The precious pearl is produced, at least in many cases, by the presence of a minute parasite in the shell-secreting mantle of the pearl-oyster and other mollusks from which pearls are obtained.

A spherical sac forms around the parasite, which becomes a nucleus about which the substance of the gem is gradually built up in concentric layers. Sometimes the parasite remains at the center of the pearl, and sometimes it migrates from the sac before it has become hopelessly imprisoned.

Reading upon these facts, Dr. H. Lyster Jameson, to whose efforts the discovery of some of them is due, suggests the possibility of the artificial production of marketable pearls by infecting beds of pearl-oysters with the particular species of parasites that are known to attack such mollusks with the effects above described.—Youth's Companion.

Might Have Been Worse.

"You seem happy, Billy," said a friend who came in, "for a man who has just been beaten for reelection."

"Why not?" asked Mason. "I always tried to look on the bright side of things. Do you remember the story of the Irish shoemaker out in Chicago who had both legs cut off by a train?"

"Cheer up," said the surgeon, who came in trim him up. "It might have been worse. You can still work at your trade."

SALT FOR THE AGED.

The Common Article Used by Berlin Physician to Prevent Arterial Degeneration.

An exceedingly interesting investigation of the causes and ills of advancing age has recently been conducted by Dr. Trunczek, a noted Berlin scientist. He declares that the most characteristic of these ills is due to deficiency of salt in the blood which causes a hardening of the arteries, arteriosclerosis, as physicians term it.

Dr. Trunczek has been treating aged patients suffering from arteriosclerosis by injection of a saline solution and with very astonishing results, states the Chicago American.

Arteriosclerosis is an affection almost exclusively confined to the second half of life, for it depends on all kinds of chronic poisoning and on the use and maltreatment of the arterial walls. Nevertheless, it is not excessively rare to meet with it in subjects who are yet young, either because of a special predisposition, of peculiar vulnerability of the blood vessels, or of serious chemical or microbial poisoning.

This malady is characterized by a local or general thickening, which, starting in the internal layer of the artery, extends later to the middle and outer layers. It forms in the great arterial trunks more or less numerous layers, isolated or confluent, often resembling cartilage, and infiltrated with calcareous salts, among which phosphate of lime holds a foremost place.

In the small arteries and the capillaries the hardening process goes so far as to transform their walls into a fibrous and compact tissue that gives to the touch the sensation of a rigid tube or cord.

The disagreeable and even dangerous consequences of such a change in one's arteries are apparent. It may result in their further degeneration and ulceration of the arterial walls, ending in death, and if matters do not go so far, it may lead at least to loss of elasticity in the greater arteries with diminution of the caliber, and to the actual obliteration of their finer branches.

The blood does not flow so readily through them and anemia results, with all its connected evils. The resistance encountered by the blood increases the work of the heart, whose enlargement often follows, as well as other heart troubles dependent on disorders of the nervous system.

When a man or a woman has attained a certain age and may be said to be in his or her declining years, arteriosclerosis is a malady almost impossible to avoid. A deposit of calcareous salts, and particularly of phosphate of lime—a compound insoluble in distilled water, but soluble in a solution of common salt—constitutes the principal factor of the malady.

RANK OF THE WHITE HOUSE.

One moonlight night in June, 1902, while strolling through the grounds with Mr. Charles F. McKim, one of the members of the park commission, we seated ourselves on one of those mounds which tradition ascribes to John Quincy Adams' taste in landscape-architecture.

Charles Moore, in "The Restoration of the White House" in Century. That afternoon crowds of people arrayed in joyous costumes befitting the semi-tropics had come from the hot city to rest under the trees and listen to the Saturday concert of the Marine band. The musicians, clad in white duck, were located in a little depression, so that the sound of the music rolled up the slopes to the attentive audience.

A year before we had observed the same effect at Versailles; and both the similarities and the differences of the two pictures were being discussed as we sat in the quiet night, behind the locked gates, where not a sound from the city streets broke the grateful noise of water splashing in the fountains.

On the high portico the president sat amid a group of dignitaries, and the lights of their cigars were "echoed" by the drowsy fires fitting about the grounds, only the brilliantly lighted windows of the secretary's office even suggesting the workaday world. The moonlight, shining full on the white house, revealed the "harmonious lines of its graceful shape."

"Tell me," I asked the architect, "among the great houses that have been built during recent years in the general style of the white house—many of them larger and much more costly—is there any that, in point of architecture, surpasses it?"

"No; there is not one in the same class with it," he replied, deliberately, a judgment confirmed later under the moonlight sun.

Killing Turtles with Arrows.

Killing a turtle with an arrow seems a very difficult feat, since a very hard shell covers practically all of the animal, yet the natives of the Andaman islands kill huge turtles with arrows as easily as American sportsmen kill rabbits with shot. Accustomed from their childhood to use bows and arrows, they soon become wonderfully skilled in the use of these primitive weapons, and, as they know the place where the turtles congregate, it is easy for them at any time to bring home a good bag of game. Sometimes they try their skill on large fish, and though the latter are harder to kill than turtles, there are a few islanders who rarely miss their mark.—Fishing Gazette.

A Suggestion.

Burgess—What a humbug Doliver is! When I asked him if he had read my article about 'The Epochal Era,' he said he had, and that it was the finest thing he had seen for years; but when I came to question him I found he didn't know the first thing about the article. What do you think of that?

A Farmer's Good Story.

Velpen, Ind., April 25th.—Wm. O. Sullivan, a highly respected farmer of this place, tells a personal experience to show that there is still some genuineness and honest worth to be met with in an age in which so many frauds are reported.

"Yes, I have been humbugged," said Mr. Sullivan, "and when I was with the Rheumatism, Kidney and Heart Trouble, I used a good deal of stuff that claimed to be remedies for these diseases only to find them worthless."

"But, as you know, I did find the genuine remedy after all and I had not been taking Dodd's Kidney Pills very long before I knew that they were an honest remedy that would do all and more than was claimed for them. They cured me, made a well man of me and I am now as sound as I ever was."

BACKACHE.

READ MISS BOLLMAN'S EXPERIENCE.

"Some time ago I was in a very weak condition, my work made me nervous and my backache frightened all the time, and I had terrible headaches."

"My mother got a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for me, and it seemed to strengthen my back and help me at once, and I did not get so tired as before. I continued to take it, and it brought health and strength to me, and I want to thank you for the good it has done me."—Miss KATE BOLLMAN, 142nd St. & Valdes Ave., New York City. —$5000 for full of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced.

Every woman who is puzzled about her condition should write to Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., and tell her all.

THE HERALD.

Eczema

How it reddens the skin, itches, oozes, dries and scales! Some people call it tetter, milk crust or salt rheum. The suffering from it is sometimes intense; local applications are resorted to, but cannot cure. It proceeds from humors inherited or acquired and persists until these have been removed.

Hood's Sarsaparilla positively removes them, has radically and permanently cured the worst cases, and is without an equal for all cutaneous eruptions. Hood's Pills are the best cathartic. Price 25 cents.

HAZEL GREEN, KY.
THURSDAY, May 14, 1903.

Mr. Sam Kash, of Stillwater, was registered at the Day House Monday.

R. J. McLin this week sold to Taylor Johnson one roan horse, about 9 years old, for $75.

To Cure a Cold in One Day

Mr. J. C. Seale, representing a large wholesale shoe house at London, was at the Day House Tuesday.

Newt Womack, of West Liberty, was visiting the family of Charley Cecil, Jim Cecil and other relatives and friends here this week.

The farmers of this vicinity are just now so busy that one is seldom seen in our town, and the place has a deserted appearance.

In the primary on Saturday this precinct gave Hedger, for Commissioner of Agriculture, and Hager, for State Auditor, 72 out of a total vote cast of 77.

Makes a Clean Sweep.

There's nothing like doing a thing thoroughly. Of all the Salves you ever heard of, Bucklen's Arnica Salve is the best. It sweeps away and cures Burns, Sores, Bruises, Cuts, Boils, Ulcers, Skin Eruptions and Piles. It's only 25c, and guaranteed to give satisfaction by J. T. Day, Hazel Green, and S. S. Combs & Sons, Campton, druggists.

A Thoughtful Man.

M. M. Austin, of Winchester, Ind., knew what to do in the hour of need. His wife had such an unusual case of stomach and liver trouble, physicians could not help her. He thought of and tried Dr. King's New Life Pills and she got relief at once. She is fully cured. Only 25c. at J. T. Day's, Hazel Green, and S. S. Combs & Sons, Campton, druggists.

R. J. McLin left this morning for a business trip to Louisville, Cincinnati, and other points, and while away will buy a stock of goods for each of the J. T. Day stores.

A Little Early Riser

Now and then, at bedtime will cure constipation, biliousness and liver troubles. DeWitt's Little Early Risers are the famous little pills that cure by arousing the secretions, moving the bowels gently, yet effectively, and giving such tone and strength to the glands of the stomach and liver that the cause of the trouble is removed entirely, and if their use is continued for a few days, there will be no return of the complaint.

There were two additions at the Christian Church Sunday night, one by acknowledgment and one by confession and baptism. The ordinance of baptism was administered Monday afternoon by the pastor.

The Wastes of the Body.

Every seven days the blood, muscles, and bones of a man of average size lose two pounds of waste tissue. The waste cannot be replenished and the health and strength kept up without perfect digestion. When the stomach and digestive organs fail to perform their functions, the strength lets down, health gives way, and disease sets up. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure cures the stomach and digestive organs to digest and assimilate all of the wholesome food that may be eaten into the kind of blood that rebuilds the tissue and protects the health and strength of the body. Kodol cures indigestion, flatulency, and all stomach troubles. It is a real spring tonic.

Thanks.

To all the dear friends who voted for Robert L. Greene, for Clerk of the Court of Appeals, on my account, I am duly grateful.
W. T. HAVENS.

THE DRAUGHT THE GREAT FAMILY MEDICINE

Thedford's Black-Draught has saved doctors' bills for more than thirty years. For the common family ailments, such as constipation, indigestion, hard colds, bowel complaints, chills and fever, biliousness, headaches and other like complaints no other medicine is necessary. It invigorates and regulates the liver, assists digestion, stimulates action of the kidneys, purifies the blood, and purges the bowels of foul accumulations. It cures liver complaint, indigestion, sour stomach, dizziness, chills, rheumatic pains, sideache, backache, kidney troubles, constipation, diarrhoea, biliousness, piles, hard colds and headaches. Every drug-gist has Thedford's Black-Draught in 25 cent packages and in mammoth size for $1.00. Never accept a substitute. Insist on having the original made by the Chattanooga Medicine Company.

I believe Thedford's Black-Draught is the best medicine on earth. It is good for any and everything. I have a family of twelve children, and for four years I have kept them in good health with no doctor but Black-Draught. A. J. GREEN, Illinois, La.

John R. Bays, who has been clerking for Hargis Bros at Jackson since January 1st, 1903, was here yesterday. He has been visiting at his home at White Oak, and after spending a few days with his friends here will go back to Jackson. John says he did not see Marcus killed, but saw his prostrate form immediately after the shooting.

An All-The-Year-Round Cottage.

A house that expresses those qualities of comfort characteristic of the "cottage" at the same time possesses such a substantial arrangement as to make it habitable all the year round is described and illustrated in the June Delinctor. Such a dwelling, while having the advantages of a summer cottage is far more of a home, and the one shown is essentially a "livable" and homelike. It is a house of moderate cost, attractive in appearance and artistic in furnishing. Home makers can find a wealth of suggestion in the article.

Every girl who is being "shined up to" with a view to matrimony, may wisely paraphrase the familiar coon song in its most serious sense: "If you haven't any insurance, you needn't come around." No matter what the condition of the male aspirant for matrimonial honors, he is in much better shape with a good paid-up policy than without it, and if he will consult our front page he can there find a blank application which will fully inform him. C. B. Rose, our young friend at McCausey, will issue him a policy in a first-class company and his sweetheart is sure to pay yes.

WANTED—A TRUSTWORTHY gentleman or lady in each county to manage business for an old established house of solid financial standing. L. J. Dunning, who some time last fall formed a partnership with John H. Rose in the carriage, wagon making and blacksmith business, pulled up stakes on Monday last and left for pastures new. The only reason assigned by Mr. Dunning for his action is that the firm had to do too much business on credit. Mr. Rose is authorized to dispose of Mr. Dunning's interest, and some good mechanic might make a nice deal by seeing him.

The X-Rays.

Recent experiments, by practical tests and examination with the aid of the X-ray, established it as a fact that Catarrh of the Stomach is not a disease of itself, but that it results from repeated attacks of indigestion. "How Can I Cure My Indigestion?" Kodol Dyspepsia Cure is curing thousands. It will cure you of indigestion and dyspepsia, and prevent or cure Catarrh of the stomach. Kodol digests what you eat—makes the stomach sweet.

Arbury Brooks took the poll books of this precinct to Campton on Monday and promised to bring us the returns from the county that evening. But the county chairman of the Democratic committee was not on hand, and the vote was not counted. Only seven of the eight precincts were represented, as there was neither ballot box or poll book sent to Holly for the primary Saturday.

The latest candidate for public favor in the newspaper field is the Estill County Herald, published at Irvine, Ky., by J. R. White, a son of Congressman Banford White. It is a 7-column folio, independent in politics, with a leaning toward Democracy, and Mr. White announces that he will use no abuse to people of different faith. The country about Irvine can and should support Mr. White's enterprise, and if they do so we believe they will be glad of it.

A Sure Thing.

It is said that nothing is sure except death and taxes, but that is not altogether true. Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption is a sure cure for all lung and throat troubles. Thousands can testify to that. Mrs. C. B. Van Metre, of Shepherdstown, W. Va., says: "I had a severe case of Bronchitis and for a year tried everything I heard of, but got no relief. One bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery then cured me absolutely." It's Infallible for Croup, Whooping Cough, Grip, Pneumonia and Consumption. Try it. It's guaranteed by J. T. Day, Hazel Green, and S. S. Combs & Sons, Campton, druggists. Trial bottles free. Regular sizes 50c. and $1.00.

Dr. F. C. Bakes, of Vevay, Ind., arrived in our town Saturday evening last, and was so favorably impressed with the place that he at once decided to locate here for the practice of his profession. Dr. Bakes is a graduate of the Louisville Medical University, but has been in active practice for two years. He is a gentleman of good address, evidently learned in Ecceupian lore, and we believe he will meet with favor from the first. His office is at the Day House, and those needing his professional services will find him prompt to respond.

SCOTT'S EMULSION

Scott's Emulsion is the means of life and of the enjoyment of life of thousands of men, women and children.

To the men Scott's Emulsion gives the flesh and strength so necessary for the cure of consumption and the repairing of body losses from any wasting disease.

For women Scott's Emulsion does this and more. It is a most sustaining food and tonic for the special trials that women have to bear.

To children Scott's Emulsion gives food and strength for growth of flesh and bone and blood. For pale girls, for thin and sickly boys Scott's Emulsion is a great help.

"THE HAZEL GREEN HERALD" has added to its mechanical and editorial force Mr. William Woodhouse, of Lexington, who comes to THE HERALD endorsed as a newspaper man of fine ability and extensive experience. THE HERALD is much above the average weekly paper and the people of Wolfe county should stand by it. What would they do without it? THE HERALD deserves success, and here's hoping that it may get it to the fullest. The Campton department of THE HERALD is a charming spread of the local happenings at Campton, and is presided over by the versatile Ben Sewell. The people of Wolfe county could not do a more appropriate and graceful part by Col. Spencer Cooper than to make his declining years joyful and happy by giving THE HERALD that support it deserves."—Jackson Hustler.

H. G. A. NOTES.

The commencement exercises for 1903 will begin May 29th and end June 3d.

Friday evening, May 29th, will be the graduating exercises of the Commercial Department. Prof. J. C. Willis, of Kentucky University, will deliver the address.

On Sunday, May 31st, Cecil J. Armstrong, pastor of the First Christian Church in Winchester, will deliver the Baccalaureate sermon at 11 a. m., and at 8 p. m. he will deliver the annual address to the Y. P. S. C. E.

Wednesday, June 3d, will be the Commencement Day programme. H. D. Clark, of Mt. Sterling, will deliver the address before the graduates.

On Wednesday evening at 8 p. m. the Salmagundi Club will again give "Victims of the Bottle," the sensational temperance drama, after which the women of the C. W. B. M. Auxiliary will give a strawberry supper.

Tom Combs and Sam and Oscar Taylor, three of the men implicated in the robbery of Joe Stamper's store at Grassy Creek, Morgan county, and the store of W. T. Caskey, of this place, which occurred during the past winter, were last week arrested at Lebanon, Va., and are now in jail at West Liberty. As the three were indicted by the Morgan county grand jury no examining trial will be necessary, and they will be tried at the next term of the Morgan Circuit Court. Messrs. Caskey and Stamper each offered a reward of $10 for the arrest of each of the three, and the County Judge of Morgan county supplemented this by offering $50 each for their arrest. The arresting officer therefore got $180 for his trip to Virginia. Two others were arraigned for trial at the last term of the Morgan Circuit Court for this same robbery, which resulted in the conviction of Dick Combs for three years, and his father's trial was postponed until next term.

The arrest was made by Dick Hamilton, of Grassy, who was working under the supervision of W. T. Caskey. About thirty days since the latter gentleman got word that the parties just arrested were at or near Lebanon, and with the reward as an incentive went to investigate. He found none of the fugitives, but arranged with the local officers, and the result was the capture of the three.

Wanted.

A man of wide acquaintance and good address to represent in Hazel Green one of the oldest, best, and cheapest accident and health companies in existence. Strength In It!
There's health and strength in a bottle of pure Beer. And Lexington brew has purity and quality. Barley in it for food. Hops for tonic. And just enough alcohol to aid digestion. Essential to the weak, healthful for anybody. A standard, high grade beer. Unsurpassed for table use and medicinal purposes. The beer that nourishes, cheers and invigorates.
